Report of the Board of Directors

There was much change on the horizon as the new financial year commenced. The work of the various committees, formed in Scotland by the Scottish Government due to the Infant Cremation Commission, continued. The Institute was represented on all committees by Bill Stanley. The Burial & Cremation (Scotland) Act 2016 received Royal Assent in early summer with focus then turning to the regulations to be made under the Act. As the new Act is phased in the board will concentrate on guidance, education and training specific to Scotland, and it was agreed by directors that a specific Diploma law unit will be created. The national investigation report into baby and infant cremation was published in June 2016. the results of which will be fed into the above formation of regulations.

Amendment of cremation regulations in England & Wales came into force on 1st October 2016 to include a definition of ashes. This was seen as the first step to regulating baby and infant cremations in a similar manner to Scotland. The board was pleased that this amendment had been made as the definition of ashes was the fundamental issue as identified in reports in Scotland. The National Working Group on Infant Cremation convened by the Ministry of Justice worked on drafting statutory forms during the year, again in a similar manner to Scotland. It is hoped that further amendment to regulations will be made in the not too distant future. The board agreed that once the cremation of foetuses has been brought into regulation the Institute’s policy on the Sensitive Disposal of Fetal Remains will have served its purpose with most of its content being redundant. It was pleasing to note that the Institute’s campaign for sensitive disposal has at last been acknowledged, albeit thirty-two years after the first policy statement was made. The board has indicated that it intends to continue to oppose sensitive incineration of babies as being insensitive and not appropriate for a caring society.

The new death certification process in Scotland, introduced in 2015, had settled down and no major problems had been reported. The introduction of the new process in England & Wales had been set for April 2018 however toward the end of the financial year it became evident that this date might be put back.

In June 2016, the Institute held a highly successful seminar on the subject of funeral poverty that explored ways in which local authorities could assist reducing the issue for its local communities. Following this in November 2016 the Institute assisted the Scottish Government in staging a one-day conference on the same subject.

The above indicates the amount of time and effort applied by the Institute in working with government departments.

On more ‘in house’ matters the board was advised by the Stratford Business School (SBS) that Pearson (formerly Edexcel) required the reaccreditation of the Diploma and CTTS. This was a major change for the Diploma as most of the previous units would no longer be available, however the new units gave the opportunity to modernise the qualification and make it even more relevant to our services. At the same time, the opportunity was taken to bring the baby and infant cremation unit into accreditation, as opposed to formerly being a separate upgrade. Under the steady hand of SBS accreditation was maintained at the same high standard for both the Diploma and CTTS unique qualifications. An accredited unit covering the management of natural burial grounds was created to widen the scope of the qualifications. This will give those already in possession of the Diploma in Cemetery & Crematorium Management to gain a second Diploma and allow the owners of natural burial grounds to gain an accredited qualification. Directors played a great part in the reaccreditation exercise by reviewing the core unit notes. Thanks go to Ian Quance, Anthony Devonport, Martin Birch and Bill Stanley. Our gratitude is also extended to Jack Startin, a long serving member for reviewing the CTTS course notes.

Our training partnership with the Society of Local Council Clerks (SLCC) continued throughout the year with the numbers of parish clerks enrolled being at an all-time high. Both the Institute and SLCC have many shared views and have been able to support one another at national meeting relating to cemeteries and the issues that they face, particularly the shortage of space. We are pleased to have such a good friend and ally in the SLCC.

The Institute continued to work with the Federation of Burial and Cremation Authorities, the Association of Private Crematoria and Cemeteries and the Cremation Society of Great Britain on the matter of coffin accreditation. The afore mentioned organisations also attended a meeting with the National Association of Funeral Directors to discuss some issues of common interest such as GTN patches.

The scheme for the recycling of metals continued to receive unprecedented surpluses that were distributed to charities nominated by scheme members. Toward the end of the financial year Orthometals informed the board that it had been able to reduce its costs for the second time and hence more funds would be available for charities. Economy of scale as more crematoria adopt the scheme together with Orthometals investing in its equipment have made this possible. The board is indebted to Orthometals for combining with us, the bereaved that give consent and the staff at the scheme crematoria for making the scheme such a success.

The move to the new venue in Oxford for the annual Learning Convention and Exhibition proved highly successful with the number of delegates being up on the previous year. Directors were pleased that so many members take advantage of Convention where they can learn about new initiatives and ideas that can be taken back to their workplace. The success of Convention is very much due to Julie Dunk and Blue Donnabaer for which thanks are due. The exhibitors play a significant role in Convention and we thank them and welcome them all to the family.
At the end of the financial year both Professional and Corporate membership had again increased. It was also noted that a sizeable surplus had been produced. This led the board to agreeing that subscriptions would not be increased in 2017 and that discussions should take place on how the surplus should be re-invested in the membership.

Toward the end of the financial year the board recognised that it needed to plan as the retirement of the Chief Executive was on the horizon. It was decided that a Deputy Chief executive would be recruited who would eventually take over. It was also decided that demand on the Institute warranted the filling of a technical office post that had been held vacant for a number of years. Following advertising and interviews Julie Dunk was appointed to the post of Deputy Chief Executive and Mathew Crawley to the post of Technical and Member Services officer. The appointment of Mathew meant that he had to stand down as Deputy President and would hence take over as President at this year’s AGM. In order to ensure continuity of the presidential line, and after taking the advice of the Company Solicitor, the board agreed to seek nominations for election both President and Deputy President, thus maintaining the democratic approach required by the articles of association.

In closing it should be noted that the year was a very busy one for the Institute thanks to you the members for our support. The board is determined to maintain standards of its accredited qualifications and initiatives that help to raise your profile.
